1 Plaintiffs’ Opposition, Docket entry 26, is based entirely on their distorted 2 reading of Assembly Bill (AB) 587 and speculation that the Attorney General will 3 use the statute to punish social media companies that do not aggressively moderate 4 “hate speech,” “misinformation,” and other disfavored content on their platforms.
 5 As set forth in the motion to dismiss, Docket entry 23-1, and in further detail below, 6 they fail to establish standing, and their claims fail as a matter of law in any event.

7 ARGUMENT

8 I. PLAINTIFFS LACK STANDING AND THEIR CLAIMS ARE NOT RIPE.

9 AB 587 has two components, a requirement that social media companies 10 disclose certain information to their users, §§ 22675(f), 22676, and a requirement 11 that social media companies report certain information to the Attorney General so it 12 can be compiled and made available to the public on the Attorney General’s 13 website, § 22677. In order to establish standing, Plaintiffs argue that the statute 14 somehow gives the Attorney General carte blanche to threaten fines and other 15 consequences as a means of dictating how social media companies moderate 16 content on their platforms. Opp’n at 8-9, 20, Docket entry 26. They further 17 contend that AB 587 requires social media companies to flag content as “hate 18 speech,” “misinformation,” etc., even if their terms of service do not use those 19 categories. Id. at 19. Their construction of the statute flies in the face of the plain 20 language of the law. AB 587 simply requires reporting of “whether the current 21 version of the terms of service define each of the following categories of content, 22 and, if so, the definitions of those categories,” as well as “[a]ny existing policies 23 intended to address the categories,” and “information on content that was flagged 24 by the social media company as content belonging to any of the categories ....” 25 § 22677(a)(3), (a)(4)(A), & (a)(5). Thus, it is entirely up to social media companies 26 to decide whether a particular post should be flagged or actioned and why (see Mot.
 27 to Dismiss at 4-5, Docket entry 23-1), and Plaintiffs do not and cannot point to 28 anything in the statute that says otherwise.

Indeed, Plaintiffs’ contorted reading is primarily based on an open letter by the Attorney General to Facebook and other platforms that mentions AB 587 along with a number of other statutes (Opp’n at 4, Docket entry 26; see Exh. 6 to Req. for Judicial Notice, Docket entry 23-8), but that letter is not even part of the statute’s legislative history—a point that Plaintiffs do not and cannot contest. In any event, Plaintiffs twist the letter, which correctly characterizes AB 587 as a “transparency” measure, and nowhere suggests that AB 587 gives the Attorney General power to “second guess” and penalize a platform’s own categorization, flagging, or actioning of content. Id. Plaintiffs’ theory of standing boils down to an unfounded fear that the Attorney General will misuse AB 587, which is insufficient to confer standing. Cf. NetChoice, LLC v. Paxton, 49 F.4th 439, 485 (5th Cir. 2022), petition for cert. docketed, No. 22-555 (U.S. Dec. 19, 2022).<sup>1</sup>

Plaintiffs also ask this Court to assume that AB 587 will make it “more likely” that very large social media companies will alter their content-moderation policies and decisions in a way that restricts Plaintiffs’ and others’ free speech. Opp’n at

<sup>1</sup> In that case social media platforms challenged Texas’s disclosure requirements on the theory that the state “might find the [required] disclosures inadequate and file suit.” Id. at 485. The court rejected the argument, holding that “the Platforms have no authority suggesting the fear of litigation can render disclosure requirements unconstitutional—let alone that the fear of hypothetical litigation can do so in a pre-enforcement posture.” Id. at 486 (italics added). The court also rejected the social media companies’ suggestion that Texas would enforce the law’s reporting “requirement in a particularly intrusive manner, such as by “demand[ing] access to platforms’ raw data,” holding that “[a]t best, they’ve shown that some of the transparency report’s disclosures, if interpreted in a particularly demanding way by Texas, might prove unduly burdensome . . . . But none of these contingencies have materialized. And even if they did, a court would need to evaluate them on a case-by-case basis.” Id. at 486 (italics in original). Although the Fifth Circuit addressed these issues in the course of discussing the merits of the social media companies’ claims, the court’s reasoning applies here, too: Plaintiffs cannot establish standing by pointing to hypothetical, speculative possibilities that the Attorney General might seek to aggressively enforce AB 587 in an intrusive and demanding fashion, particularly given that the statute leaves it entirely up to social media companies to decide whether to flag or action content on their platforms.

1 9:21, 10:11 (italics added). But this just highlights the fact that, even though the 2 disclosure requirement has been in effect for nearly six months, there are no factual
3 allegations that any social media company – including Salem Media Group, Inc. – 4 has actually done so as a result of AB 587. Nor does the FAC allege that any 5 Plaintiff has actually been subject to “censorship” by a social media platform as a 6 result of AB 587.

7 Nor can Plaintiffs manufacture standing by arguing that they are bringing a 8 “pre-enforcement challenge” governed by a more “relaxed First Amendment 9 standard.” Opp’n at 7. Plaintiffs allege and argue extensively that AB 587 was 10 designed specifically to squelch and punish speech disfavored by the government, 11 including Plaintiffs’ own speech, and that this is borne out by the Attorney 12 General’s open letter to Facebook, the author’s comments about the bill, and other 13 statements. Opp’n at 1-2, 4. Thus, the FAC is properly viewed as asserting a 14 retaliation claim, rather than a pre-enforcement challenge to AB 587. See Twitter v.
15 Paxton, 56 F.4th 1170, 1174-75 (9th Cir. 2022) (complaint alleging that Texas 16 Attorney General “targeted [Twitter] specifically with the [civil investigative 17 demand] and related investigation” for its decision to ban former President Trump 18 from the platform was properly viewed as a retaliation claim for standing purposes).
19 And, in a retaliation case, the standing inquiry “focuses directly on the three 20 elements that form the ‘irreducible constitutional minimum’ of Article III 21 standing.” Id. at 1174 (citation omitted). As explained in the motion to dismiss, 22 Plaintiffs fail to meet that test because they allege no injury-in-fact beyond 23 speculative possibilities. See id. at 1175-76 (holding that Twitter’s allegations of 24 self-censorship were too vague and conclusory to establish standing). Even 25 viewing the FAC as asserting a pre-enforcement challenge, it still fails to 26 adequately allege standing, because, as explained, Plaintiffs’ theory of injury is 27 based on a distorted reading of the statute’s actual requirements, which is 28

1 insufficient to show an “actual or well-founded fear that the law will be enforced”
2 against Plaintiffs or any of them. Id. at 1174 (italics added).<sup>2</sup>

3 Finally, the cases on which Plaintiffs rely are readily distinguishable. As 4 explained, AB 587 does not restrict what anyone can say on social media, nor does 5 it require social media platforms to take, or not take, action against any particular 6 item of content or user. Thus, it is nothing like the restrictions at issue in Prison 7 Legal News v. Livingston, 683 F.3d 201, 212-13 (5th Cir. 1980) (finding standing to 8 challenge prison regulation that prevented publisher from sending certain books to 9 inmates); Lamont v. Postmaster General, 381 U.S. 301, 302, 305 (1965) (finding 10 standing to challenge post office restriction preventing members of the public from 11 receiving “communist political propaganda” through the mails); or Forsythe v.
12 Nationalist Movement, 505 U.S. 123, 132-34 (1992) (finding standing to challenge 13 a permitting requirement that operated as a prior restraint on speech). Bantam 14 Books, Inc. v. Sullivan, 372 U.S. 58, 61-62, 64 & n.6 (1963), and LSO, Ltd. v. Stroh, 15 205 F.3d 1146, 1153-54 (9th Cir. 2000), are also inapposite, as both involved 16 threats of prosecution for publishing or distributing content deemed obscene or 17 otherwise harmful by the government. Again, notwithstanding Plaintiffs’ 18 conclusory assertions that AB 587 “censors” speech, it does not dictate what a 19 social media platform can or must do with respect to any content posted by users.<sup>3</sup>

20 The cases Plaintiffs cite in support of their claim that Plaintiff National 21 Religious Broadcasters (“NRB”) has associational standing are similarly unhelpful

22 <sup>2</sup> The principle that a court must accept as true the factual allegations of the 23 FAC does not apply to unreasonable inferences or legal conclusions, such as 24 Plaintiffs’ mischaracterization of AB 587. See Mot. to Dismiss at 8, Docket entry 23-1.

25 <sup>3</sup> Plaintiffs’ further suggestion that they should be permitted to sue because 26 “dominant tech firms” like Google and Facebook are “less likely to challenge” AB 27 587 (Opp’n at 11, 12) is both unavailing and puzzling. These companies have not 28 shied from challenging other laws and government actions in the social media space, but they have not challenged AB 587. Regardless, even if Plaintiffs were right that Google and Facebook have less incentive to challenge AB 587, that would not excuse Plaintiffs’ failure to allege their own injury-in-fact.

1 to them. In each, the plaintiff-association alleged an actual, specific injury to a 2 member (or de facto member). Inland Empire Waterkeeper v. Corona Clay Co., 17 3 F.4th 824, 833-34 (9th Cir. 2021) (standing found based on declarations of 4 plaintiff's members identifying specific interests that were harmed); Am. Unites for 5 Kids v. Rousseau, 985 F.3d 1075, 1097 (9th Cir. 2021) (standing found where 6 member suffered stress and anxiety from having to continue teaching in classroom 7 containing illegal levels of PCBs); Hunt v. Wash. State Apple Advert. Comm'n, 432 8 U.S. 333, 335 (1977) (standing found where state commission composed of elected 9 apple growers and dealers allegedly suffered specific injuries to its interests).

10 Here, in contrast, Plaintiffs argue that NRB has a single member (Salem 11 Media) that is subject to AB 587's disclosure requirements, and that "AB 587 will 12 compel Salem Media to 'censor speech to avoid penalties.'" Opp'n at 8, Docket 13 entry 26 (quoting FAC, ¶ 121.) But that is simply a conclusory allegation of the 14 FAC based on Plaintiffs' contorted interpretation of the statute. Salem is not a 15 party to this case, and Plaintiffs' allegation that AB 587 will somehow force Salem 16 to censor speech (either its own or others') is simply unsupported speculation. The 17 FAC contains no allegations of fact that plausibly support that conclusion. Notably, 18 Plaintiffs do not allege that Salem has actually changed its terms of service or taken 19 any other action to censor speech in response to AB 587. Regardless, AB 587 by 20 its terms could not give rise to a reasonable fear of prosecution or censorship, and 21 Plaintiffs' theory that the Attorney General might enforce the statute to retaliate 22 against platforms that do not moderate content for hate speech and the other section 23 22677(a)(3) categories plainly is too vague and speculative to support standing. See 24 Twitter, Inc. v. Paxton, 56 F.4th at 1175.

25 II. PLAINTIFFS' FIRST AMENDMENT CLAIM FAILS AS A MATTER OF LAW.

26 A. The Disclosures Are Purely Factual and Uncontroversial.

27 Plaintiffs argue that AB 587 is a viewpoint-based speech regulation because it 28 requires disclosures that relate to hate speech and the other categories listed in the 1 statute, and thus are controversial. But Plaintiffs base this proposition on cases that 2 restrict speech, not cases that require disclosure. See cases cited in Opp’n at 13-14, 3 Docket entry 26. Commercial disclosure requirements are analyzed under Zauderer

 4 v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel, 471 U.S. 626 (1985). See e.g., CTIA – Wireless 5 Assn. v. City of Berkeley, 928 F.3d 832, 842-43 (9th Cir. 2019).

6 Both Circuit Courts that have addressed similar disclosure requirements 7 imposed on social media platforms have held that Zauderer provides the correct
 8 legal standard and have upheld them. See NetChoice, LLC v. Att’y Gen. 34 F.4th 9 1196, 1230-31 (11th Cir. 2022), petition for cert. docketed, No. 22-277 (U.S. Sept.
 10 23, 2022); NetChoice, LLC v. Paxton, 49 F.4th at 485.<sup>4</sup> Plaintiffs argue that 11 AB 587 is unlike the Florida and Texas disclosure requirements, and that the New 12 York statute at issue in Volokh v. James, – F. Supp. 3d –, No. 22-CV-10195 (ALC),
 13 2023 WL 1991435 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 14, 2023), provides the “closest analog,” Opp’n 14 at 18, Docket entry 26, but that statute is strikingly different. It requires social 15 media networks to “devise and implement a written policy” that allows users to 16 complain about “hateful conduct,” defined by the statute to mean “conduct which

 18 <sup>4</sup> The Texas statute at issue in Netchoice LLC v. Paxton, 34 F.4th at 1230, 19 provides: “(a) A social media platform shall publish an acceptable use policy in a 20 location that is easily accessible to a user. [¶] (b) A social media platform's 21 acceptable use policy must: [¶] (1) reasonably inform users about the types of 22 content allowed on the social media platform; [¶] (2) explain the steps the social 23 media platform will take to ensure content complies with the policy; [¶] (3) explain 24 the means by which users can notify the social media platform of content that 25 potentially violates the acceptable use policy, illegal content, or illegal activity, 26 which includes: [¶] (A) an e-mail address or relevant complaint intake mechanism 27 to handle user complaints; and [¶] (B) a complaint system described by Subchapter 28 C; and [¶] (4) include publication of a biannual transparency report outlining actions taken to enforce the policy.” Texas Bus & C. Code § 120.052. The Florida disclosure statute at issue in NetChoice, LLC v. Att’y Gen., 34 F.4th at 1230 provides: “A social media platform must publish the standards, including detailed definitions, it uses or has used for determining how to censor, deplatform, and shadow ban.” Fla. Stat. § 501.2041(2)(a). Thus, under both laws, social media platforms that moderate conduct based on hate speech or other categories must disclose that (and under Florida law must provide definitions), requirements that the Fifth and Eleventh Circuits held were permissible under Zauderer.

1 tends to ‘vilify, humiliate, or incite violence’ ‘on the basis of race, color, religion, 2 ethnicity, national origin, disability, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity or 3 gender expression.’” Id. at *5. In contrast, AB 587 does not require social media 4 platforms to allow their users to complain about “hate speech” or the other 5 categories listed in § 22677(a)(3), let alone define those categories for social media 6 platforms. It simply requires platforms to post their terms of service, including the 7 procedure for users to flag content that “they believe violate [the platform’s] terms 8 of service ....” § 22677(a)(3) (italics added). And, in semiannual reports to the 9 Attorney General, social media companies must state “whether the current version 10 of the terms of service defines each of the following categories of content and, if so, 11 the definitions of those categories, including any subcategories ....” § 22677(a)(3).
12 The reports must also include “[i]nformation on content that was flagged by the 13 social media company as content belonging to any of the categories described in 14 paragraph [22677(a)(3)] ....” § 22677(a)(5). Thus, Plaintiffs are flatly incorrect in 15 arguing that “[n]othing in the statute limits this reporting to categories already in a 16 platform’s terms of service.” Opp’n at 9, Docket entry 26. By referring back to 17 “the categories described in [§ 22677(a)(3)],” section 22677(a)(5) makes it crystal 18 clear that reporting on posts flagged or actioned as “hate speech,” “misinformation” 19 etc. is only required if the platform itself categorizes and defines content as such.
20 Similarly, Plaintiffs are asking the court to ignore the plain text of the statute by 21 arguing that the reporting obligation in section 22677(a)(5) is “not cabined by any 22 ‘if so’ language.” Opp’n at 19. Section 22677(a)(5) is expressly and unequivocally 23 cabined by “if so language” because it refers back to 22677(a)(3), which leaves it 24 up to social media companies to categorize and define the content on their 25 platforms as they see fit. Thus, Plaintiffs’ attempts to show that AB 587 is 26 somehow “viewpoint based” and closely analogous to the law at issue in Volokh 27 (Opp’n at 18) are meritless.

1 Plaintiffs’ further reliance on National Institute of Family & Life Advocates v.
 2 Becerra, 138 S.Ct, 2361 (2018), is similarly unavailing. Opp’n at 15-16, Docket 3 entry 26. The Supreme Court held the statutorily-required notice at issue there “in 4 no way relates to the services that licensed clinics provide. Instead, it requires these 5 clinics to disclose information about state-sponsored services—including abortion, 6 anything but an ‘uncontroversial’ topic.” Id. at 2372 (italics in original). The Court 7 was clear: “we do not question the legality of health and safety warnings long 8 considered permissible, or purely factual and uncontroversial disclosures about 9 commercial products.” Id. at 2376. Here, social media platforms must report 10 information on content flagged by them as “hate speech,” “misinformation” etc.
 11 only if their terms of service already categorize content on the platform as such.
 12 § 22677(a)(3), (a)(5). The platforms alone get to decide whether to do that; thus, 13 the required disclosures are purely factual and non-controversial. “The First 14 Amendment does not generally protect corporations from being required to tell 15 prospective customers the truth.” Nationwide Biweekly Admin. v. Owen, 873 F.3d 16 716, 721 (9th Cir. 2017).

17 B. California Has a Substantial Interest in Requiring Disclosure.

18 Plaintiffs do not appear to dispute that California has an interest in mandating 19 disclosures that allow consumers to make informed decisions, but argue that, if 20 social media companies are free to decide whether to moderate “hate speech” and 21 “misinformation” etc., and to “subjectively” define those categories (and they are 22 free to do so), then “the justification for AB 587 collapses” because “there are no 23 comparisons to be made.” Opp’n at 16, Docket entry 26. To the contrary, the 24 statute requires social media companies to post their current terms of service, 25 allowing direct comparisons. § 22676(a). It also requires them to report 26 information on content they have flagged or actioned “as content belonging to any 27 of the categories” (§ 22677(a)(5)), and leaves it up to them to define those 28 categories, but that does not mean the statute produces “no discernible benefit.”

1 Opp’n at 17. AB 587 will provide more information than consumers currently have 2 about content-moderation decisions that platforms have made, and the fact that it 3 may not facilitate strictly apples-to-apples comparisons in that respect does not 4 mean the statute will not be useful. Plaintiffs cite no cases to the contrary, and it is 5 not the province of the Court to judge the wisdom or efficacy of AB 587, merely 6 whether it is designed to serve a legitimate state interest.

7 Plaintiffs’ further argument that the state “has no interest in the suppression of 8 political advocacy” (Opp’n at 17, Docket entry 26), while generally true, assumes 9 the premise—that AB 587 suppresses speech, which it does not. Their related 10 argument that the government may not compel disclosures with the goal of bringing 11 public pressure to bear on social media companies is also unfounded. Many 12 disclosure/transparency statutes are designed to encourage public scrutiny of 13 business practices. See, e.g., Beeman v. Anthem Prescription Mgmt., LLC, 165 Cal.
 14 Rptr. 3d 800, 816, 821-22 (Cal. 2013) (upholding law requiring prescription drug 15 claim processors to compile and disclose information on pharmacy fees, despite 16 argument that information would be used to influence public debate on drug 17 reimbursement rates); S.F. Apartment Ass’n v. City & Cnty. of S.F., 881 F.3d 1169, 18 1176-77 (9th Cir. 2018) (upholding ordinance requiring landlords to provide 19 tenants with information about tenants’ rights organizations before engaging in 20 lease buyout negotiations); Am. Meat Inst. v. U.S. Dep’t of Agric., 760 F.3d 18, 27 21 (D.C. Cir. 2014) (en banc) (upholding regulation requiring disclosure of country-of-22 origin information for meat); N.Y. State Rest. Ass’n v. N.Y.C. Bd. of Health, 556 23 F.3d 114 (2d Cir. 2009) (upholding ordinance requiring restaurants to post calorie 24 content on menus). Cf. Kennedy v. Warren, 66 F.4th 1199, 1208 (9th Cir. 2023) 25 (holding that “[g]enerating public pressure to motivate others to change their 26 behavior is a core part of public discourse” and passes First Amendment scrutiny).
 27 John Doe No. 1 v. Reed, 561 U.S. 186, 201 (2010), cited by Plaintiffs, is inapposite.
 28 Under the “exacting scrutiny” standard applicable to challenges in the electoral

1 context, the Supreme Court upheld the mandatory public disclosure of referendum 2 petitions, while noting that the ruling would not prevent a narrower challenge if 3 plaintiffs could show that disclosure would subject petition signers to threats, 4 harassment or reprisals if their names were disclosed. Id. at 928.

5 C. Plaintiff’s Undue Burden Argument Is Meritless.

6 Plaintiffs’ undue burden claim rests simply on its speculation that the statute 7 “will affect Salem’s editorial decisions,” and that the statute’s requirements “will 8 chill speech.” Opp’n at 19, Docket entry 26. This would be insufficient even if 9 Salem were a named plaintiff making allegations as to its own state of mind – and it 10 is not. See Twitter, Inc. v. Paxton, 56 F.4th at 1175-1176.

11 III. PLAINTIFFS’ OVERBREADTH CLAIM FAILS AS A MATTER OF LAW.

12 Plaintiffs’ overbreadth claim relies, again, on their strained reading that AB 13 587 requires platforms to moderate content based on the categories listed in section 14 22677(a)(3). Opp’n at 19-20. As discussed above, this is simply incorrect.

15 IV. PLAINTIFFS’ VAGUENESS CLAIM FAILS AS A MATTER OF LAW.

16 Plaintiffs’ vagueness argument simply refers to their own conclusory 17 allegations that the categories in section 22677(a)(3) are vague. This again ignores 18 that social media companies are not required to categorize content in any particular 19 way by AB 587; it is up to them to decide whether to label and take action against 20 “hate speech,” “misinformation,” etc., and to provide their own definitions of those 21 categories, if they choose to use them in their terms of service at all. The allusion 22 to the possibility that the Attorney General will enforce the law to punish 23 disclosures “not to his liking,” FAC ¶ 49, Docket entry 20, falls far short of alleging 24 a plausible claim because it is based on a blatant misreading of the statute.

25 CONCLUSION

26 The Court should dismiss the FAC without leave to amend.
